1. Because there have been some apparent misunderstandings in the past about the proper use of the proper use use of the proper use of the proper use of the proper use of the

a. The channel will be used for selection, installation and use of communications facilities, cryptographic procedures, circuit citations, training and other similar purely technical communications matters, which have no implications in the command structure.

b. The channel will not be used for subject matter that falls within the prerogatives of established command. In particular it will not be used for administrative and personnel matters.

c. The channel will not be used to give advance communications guidance on pending operations until the responsible commander has been notified through command channels, utilizing channels of minimum distribution (see a second command channels).

2. I believe these rules will allow you the desirable flexibility in management of communications and yet not have us run the risk of appearing to operate two separate sets of communications.
